The Impact of Tanzania’s New Land Laws on the Customary Land Rights of Pastoralists - Kennedy Gustave 2008 This book investigates the effects of the 1999 Tanzania land legislation on customary land tenure, particularly that of pastoralists. It is an original, empirical and theoretical critical study of the laws and the implementation in securing land tenure of customary landholders in the face of the changing social-political, and structural contexts, and as such constitutes a contribution to the current debate about the future of customary land tenure in the reformed Tanzanian economy. Among issues that receive particular attention in this study are the development of pastoral land tenure, the main features of the new land laws, introduced land schemes for pastoralists, land dispute mechanisms, the certification of village lands, investments on village land, the inclusion of unused or unoccupied village lands into the category of general land, land’s land rights and pillar value in administration and participation in management of land...

Sustaining and Sharing Economic Growth in Tanzania - Robert J. Xu 2008 Far reaching macro-economic and structural reforms combined with increases in government administrative efficiency, the introduction of tax incentives for locational advantages offered by natural resources, and improved financial management for growth will need to shift demand for exports and domestically produced goods, requiring Tanzania to strengthen substantially its international competitiveness, accelerate structural change, and safeguard the environment while maintaining macroeconomic stability. For Tanzania’s poor to be able to participate and benefit from important growth, a greater focus on rapid development of social services is required. The poor is suggested. Successful design and implementation of a shared growth strategy will also require a strengthening of policy management and coordination in Tanzania to ensure that scarce land and financial resources are effectively deployed.

Local Government Taxation Reform in Tanzania - Sarah Moses,旅游 2018-08-17 Master’s Thesis from the year 2016 in the subject Women Studies / Gender Studies, grade: A, University of Pavia, language: English, abstract: Gender inequality and structural poverty grip Tanzania, a country situated in the Sub Saharan Africa. The UNDP report 2015 notes that, Tanzania ranks 125 out of 155 countries in the Gender Inequality Index with a rating of 0.547. This reality has marred the progress of women, resulting in a negative impact on the country’s development. This study critically examines this inequality and how that has had a regressive effect on Tanzania’s development. In this quest, a review of international, regional and local policies of legislation on women rights will therefore be done to establish the misconceptions and the impact on the development of women especially in the context of land reform.

The Impact of African Integration on Tanzania’s Economy - Flora Mwende Mwasa 2000

Local Government Taxation Reform in Tanzania - Social Development 2006 The 2004 Local Government Tax reform was designed to examine the intended and unintended consequences on poverty reduction and growth in Tanzania of the tax reforms implemented in June 2003 and 2004. The main elements of the reform were the abolishment of the flat rate development levy in 2003 along with nuisance taxes, and theabolishment of business license fees in 2004.

Responsible and Smart Land Management Interventions - Walter Timo de Vries 2020-07-16 This book showcases new empirical findings on the conceptualization, design, and evaluation of land management interventions and addresses two crucial aspects: how and under what conditions such interventions are responsible, and how to go about designing and executing such interventions can be supported by smart technologies. Responsible and Smart Land Management Interventions is for all types of actors in land management. Although primarily based on cases from Africa, it addresses land management issues from practical and theoretical perspectives relevant for land managers worldwide. The book will provide policy makers and practitioners with new instruments to do so. Aimed at land academics, including students, teachers, and researchers, as well as practitioners, including those working within international organisations, donor organisations, NGOs, and local governments. It provides a comprehensive account of the burden across different social and income groups and small businesses. In the book, the author presents the results of her research using a variety of research methods and analysis techniques, including case studies, interviews, and surveys.

Local Government Taxation Reform in Tanzania - Welbick 2012 The 2005 Tanzania poverty and social impact analysis (PSIA) on local government tax reform was designed to examine the intended and unintended consequences on poverty reduction and growth in Tanzania of the tax reforms implemented in June 2003 and 2004. The main elements of the reform were the abolishment of the flat rate development levy in 2003 along with nuisance taxes, and theabolishment of business license fees in 2004. This PSIA had two principal aims: (a) to assess the distribution of the tax revenue, expected to be 4.8 percent growth in 2020, and is expected to remain subdued in 2021. The government has already announced the 2021-2022 national budget, and is expected to be focused on job creation and social protection measures.

Human Trafficking Under International and Tanzanian Law - Nicolaas Fihert Kahanja 2021-04-09 This book deals with the problem of human trafficking in Tanzania. It is the first book to discuss the legal status of human trafficking as both a criminal offence in Tanzania and a human rights violation within international law in general. The book offers a comprehensive account of the burden across different social and income groups and small businesses. In the book, the author presents the results of her research using a variety of research methods and analysis techniques, including case studies, interviews, and surveys.

The State and the Paradox of Customary Law in Africa - Olad Zander 2018-02-02 Customary law and traditional authorities continue to play highly complex and contradictory roles in contemporary Africa. In this book, the author outlines the paradox of customary law in Africa. This volume analyses the interactions between state and non-state normative orders that have shaped the everyday world of the African. It argues that, in their daily work, African customary institutions are engaged in a complex process of creating, contesting, and adapting themselves to the demands of the modern world. The book offers a comprehensive account of the burden across different social and income groups and small businesses. In the book, the author presents the results of her research using a variety of research methods and analysis techniques, including case studies, interviews, and surveys.
multiple, inconsistent and piecemeal ways. Assembling inventive case studies on state-driven land reforms in South Africa and Tanzania, the police in Mozambique, reformists and traditionalists in Zanzibar, this book makes a major contribution to the understanding of Tanzania's state and society since independence.

They do not clearly link these to the development processes. This is a potentially significant step both for Tanzania and for the broader development policy understanding of Tanzania.

2020, the World Bank engaged in a series of activities to garner feedback about the new strategy. In early 2011, a revised strategy was published entitled, "Learning for All: Investing in People’s Knowledge and Skills to Promote Development." The document ranges from explaining the role of education in development to the philosophy behind a new strategy and concludes with details about performance and impact indicators. To bring together the scholarly work and both evidence and expert opinion about the development practices of the Bank, this volume includes chapters/authors with a range of research interests, practical experience, and ideological backgrounds.

Normative Spaces and Legal Dynamics in Africa - Katrin Seidel 2020-06-09 African legal realities reflect an intertwining of transnational, regional, and local normative frameworks, institutions, and practices that challenge the idea of the sovereign territorial state. This book analyses the novel constellations of governance actors and conditions under which they interact and compete. The work follows a spatial approach as the emphasis on normative spaces opens avenues to better understand power relations, processes of institutionalization, and the production of legitimacy and normativities themselves. Selected case studies from thirteen African countries deliver new empirical data and grounded insights from, and into, particular normative spaces. The individual chapters explore the interrelationships between various normative orders, diverse actors, and their influences. The encounters between different normative understandings and actors open up space and multiple forums for negotiating values. The authors analyse how different doctrines, institutions, and practices are constructed, contested, negotiated, and adapted in translation processes and thereby continuously reshape Africa’s multidimensional normative spaces. The volume delivers nuanced views of jurisprudence in Africa and presents an excellent resource for scholars and students of anthropology, legal geography, legal studies, sociology, political sciences, international relations, African studies, and anyone wishing to gain a better understanding of how legal constellations are shaped by unreflected assumptions about the state and the rule of law.

Gender and Economic Growth in Tanzania - 2007 While Tanzania has been at the forefront of creating a positive legal framework and political context for gender equality, certain legal, regulatory, and administrative barriers still hinder women’s full participation in private sector development. This report analyzes these barriers and makes recommendations for needed change, to ensure women’s full contribution to private sector development and economic growth in Tanzania. Building on intensive stakeholder consultations and the findings of numerous studies, notably the MAJARITA diagnostic and the 2003/4 Investment Climate Assessments for Tanzania and Zanzibar, this report examines these gender-related barriers to growth and investment. It highlights legal and administrative constraints that have a disproportionately negative effect on female-owned businesses, and makes recommendations for needed reforms. Addressing these issues would not only help unlock the full economic potential of women, but would help improve the environment for all businesses in Tanzania. While Tanzania’s economic growth has been strong, this report finds that if the country were to bring female secondary schooling and female total years of schooling to the same level as now enjoyed by males, this could produce up to an additional annual percentage point of growth - a valuable contribution to achieving the 6-8 percent annual growth targets of the National Strategy for Growth and Reduction of Poverty (NSGGRP or MKUKUTA).
